Quick Tip
With Purim coming, what better way to teach your class about mishloach manos than to have a baking session? And what better opportunity to introduce your students to the different "Jews of the World" than to use these delicious baking recipes from Jewish communities of diverse countries?

The recipes we are enclosing are from the cookbook, Jewish Cooking from Around the World, written by Josephine Levy Bacon and published by Barron's Educational Series. As you and your students bake these recipes, be sure to discuss the different minhagim of the various Jewish communities.

Then the students can use the scrumptious baked goods in their mishloach manos for their families, friends or nursing home residents.
