

Rivky Greenberger

Rivky Greenberger began her teaching career in New York 14 years ago at Yeshiva Ketana of Long Island, HAFTR and Shulamith School for Girls and then at the Maimonides Academy of Los Angeles. Since her arrival in Chicago, she's been teaching in Arie Crown Hebrew Day School. Rivky feels incredibly proud and privileged to be part of the exceptional staff at Arie Crown. She spends her Sunday mornings teaching in JFE, a dynamic, family-based Hebrew School program.

Rivky was inspired to be a teacher from a young age by her parents, both educators, who showed her what it means to teach with passion. She watched as her mother lovingly prepared her lessons down to the last detail with excitement and anticipation. She observed her father interacting with his students at his שבת table and listened as he taught them beautiful songs and gave over meaningful דברי תורה.

Rivky's classroom is a place where great things are expected from every child who walks through the door. She makes sure that her students know beyond a shadow of a doubt that she loves them, believes in their greatness and will do whatever it takes to provide a joyous and exciting learning experience. Her ultimate goal as an educator is to find a way to reach and teach each and every one of her students and to inspire them with a love of learning that will leave an indelible mark for a lifetime.
