Requirements for EPIC Teacher Participants for 2022 - 2023

Following are requirements for teachers who are participating in the EPIC program during the 2022 - 2023 Academic Year. Please note that your signature means that you have read them and agree to abide by each requirement. You will be asked to discuss these expectations with Rabbi Avrohom Shimon Moller or with Dr. Jeff Winter prior to the start of the program.

Participants who do not fulfill this agreement may forfeit all or part of the honorarium at the discretion of the program directors.

Agreement Expectations

- Teachers are expected to devote time to the EPIC program in lesson planning and goal setting. This includes obligations which occur outside regular school hours, including; lesson planning, journaling, checking email, and review of articles or other educational materials.
- Teachers need to make good faith efforts to schedule observations at times which are mutually acceptable with mentors, and insure that coverage for their classrooms is available during conference time if necessary.
- Teachers need to be available and responsive through email and phone with their mentors and other program personnel.
- Teachers need to complete a survey about the experience and send to the address as directed on the form by May 1, 2023.
- Teachers are required to attend three EPIC evening programs during the academic year. Credit for ATT certification is available for this. Dates for the seminars will be set to meet the needs of the majority of participants. Provisions for making up this requirement are available but if a teacher does not fulfill this requirement, a small part of the stipend will be deducted.
- Teachers need to keep a weekly reflective journal which is shared with their mentor.
- Teachers will receive a summary report from their mentors and teachers are required to write a summary report to their principals and to Dr. Winter about their experiences in the program. Participants will receive a template for the report from Dr. Winter.
